A Bid for the Forest

WONDERLAND AUCTION RAISES MONEY
FOR OREGON'S ECOSYSTEMS by Camilla Mortensen

Every year, a local conservation group turns an otherwise staid meeting hall into a winter wonderland. It's not so much the decorations — if there are any, aside from nicely draped tables, I've never noticed — but rather the spirit with which the 300 or so attendees show up ready to enjoy themselves and spend money to support Cascadia Wildlands and its work to preserve Oregon's forests and ecosystems.

Cascadia Wildlands' "Wonderland Auction" takes place Dec. 12 at Lane Community College, and those attending can bid on everything from a rafting trip with the group's executive director to spa gift certificates and jackets from Tactics.

More than 200 businesses donated to the event, according to auction organizer and Cascadia Wildlands' operations and communications director Kaley CoslowSauer.

The group's motto is "we like it wild," and it's not unusual for attendees to show up to the annual event in everything from a tux and evening wear to jeans and a flannel shirt, though CoslowSauer says it's a "cocktail attire" sort of night. Cocktail attire aside, children are welcome; she tells EW that children under 12 get in free.

CoslowSauer says the auction is the group's biggest event of the year. Last year they raised a record $40,000 between the live and silent auctions and the "paddle raise," with donations that go straight to the nonprofit. The paddle-raise money is tax deductible, CoslowSauer says, as are items donated to the auction to sell,

WONDERLAND
AUCTION
ATTENDEES

and any money paid for gifts above their value are "most likely" tax deductible.

Alyssa Lawless, director of sustainability for longtime event sponsor Mountain Rose Herbs, says that as "a mission-driven company," Mountain Rose aims to support local environmental nonprofits, and Cascadia's mission to protect "wildlife, water quality and our land is important to Mountain Rose because this is where our employees live and play." For those who prefer nonalcoholic drinks, the event will have teas by Mountain Rose.

In addition to the holiday shopping at the live and silent auctions, those who head out to the event can sip local ciders, beers and wines from Ninkasi, Oakshire and Agrarian Ales, Opine Cellars and WildCraft Cider Works as they eat a Northwest "gourmet meal" prepared by LCC catering, CoslowSauer says. There will "funky jazz" music by The Requests, featuring members of Eugene's own Eleven Eyes.

CoslowSauer says that each year at the auction, Cascadia Wildlands announces a focus for the coming year, which this time will be climate change, safeguarding the Elliott State Forest, stopping liquefied natural gas pipelines and keeping Oregon's water cool and clean for salmon and recreation. ♦

The 13th annual Wonderland Auction is 6 to 10 pm, Dec. 12, at LCC's Center for Meeting and Learning. Tickets can be purchased online until Dec. 7 at casewild.org for $50 in advance; it's $60 at the door. Tables for eight, which include two bottles of wine, can be reserved, and it's also possible to volunteer a two-hour shift at the event in exchange for a ticket.

A Child's Christmas Memory

EUGENE ACTOR CELEBRATES 31 YEARS OF PERFORMING A CHILD'S CHRISTMAS IN WALES by William Kennedy

Eugene actor David Stuart Bull has been performing Dylan Thomas' timeless story A Child's Christmas in Wales for so long, people have forgotten exactly how long it's been.

Ib Hamide, owner of Café Soriah where Bull performs the piece, says 27 or 28 years. Bull says it's been more than 30. "This will be, by my count, the 31st year," Bull claims.

What's not debatable is that his annual performance of the piece is a local tradition.

Bull is an Englishman by birth. "My earliest memories of Christmas are very much like the story," he says. "When I first read the story it was such a nice surprise to rediscover someone who had captured the sense of Christmas that I remember growing up."

His performance is accompanied by Celtic music from local musicians Chico Schwall and Linda Danielson.

"The show starts out with half an hour of Celtic music," Hamide explains, "then David comes on after that." Hamide says that before the reading Soriah will serve appetizers, drinks and dessert.

"A lot of people come back year after year," Bull says. "It's a very small venue. It gets filled up very quickly."

Over the years, Bull has come to know A Child's Christmas in Wales intimately. Nevertheless, he says his relationship to the text is always changing.

"It's such a well-written story," Bull says, "and I bring so much of my own experience of Christmas into the performance that just about every time I do it, it's a sense of the first time."

"Different things resonate with me from year to year," he continues. "Along with the musical atmosphere, it's really quite exciting for me to still do it after all this time." ♦

A Child's Christmas in Wales plays at 3 pm Dec. 11-12 and Dec. 18-19 as well as at 9:30 pm Dec. 21-24 at Café Soriah, 384 W. 13th Ave.; $10. Call 342-4410 for reservations. Space is limited.

Crack Your Nuts with Holiday Dance

A SEASON OF SUGARPLUM FAIRIES, NARNIA ADVENTURES,
DANCING DICKENS AND MORE By Rachael Carnes

TIt's the holiday season, and all across town, stages start to sparkle with gyrating gumdrops, spinning snowflakes and leaping lions. So grab a hot cocoa in the lobby and settle in for a nice break from your to-do list as you take in some of this shimmering season of dance.

This is the biggest time of year for dance recitals for local studios, and these hard-working young dancers are gearing up to strut their stuff.

Catch Oregon Ballet Academy's Snow White and the

Seven Dancing Dwarfs at 2 pm and 7 pm Saturday, Nov. 28, and 2 pm and 6 pm Sunday, Nov. 29, in the Ragozzino Performance Hall at Lane Community College; $15.

All That! Dance Company offers its Nutcracker Remixed 7 pm Saturday, Nov. 28, at the Hult Center. The show features "upbeat music, energetic dancing and magical surprises on stage," says choreographer Sarah Beth Byrum; $22-$33.

The Eugene Youth Ballet offers many public performances of its captivating Nutcracker. Find them at 5:30 pm Friday, Nov. 20, at Light Up Downtown; 7 pm Monday, Nov. 30, at the UO Global Scholars Hall; 4 pm Thursday, Dec. 3, in the Springfield Public Library; 10:15 am Friday, Dec. 4, at the Sheldon Branch of the Eugene Public Library; 2:45 pm Saturday, Dec. 5, at the Waldorf School; 4 pm and 5 pm Wednesday, Dec. 9, at the Eugene Public Library downtown; 7:30 pm Thursday, Dec. 10, at Elmira High School; and 10:15 am Friday, Dec. 11, at the Bethel Branch of the Eugene Public Library; all shows are free. Whew! That's a lot of marzipan.

And Hosanna Dance presents its Adventures in Narnia, inspired by C.S. Lewis' beloved novel The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe, at 1 pm and 6 pm Saturday, Dec. 12, and 4 pm Sunday, Dec. 13, in LCC's Ragozzino Performance Hall.

On the professional front, Ballet Fantastique reprises its popular An American Christmas Carol, a jazzy twist on the classic tale of redemption. Choreographers Donna and Hannah Bontrager re-imagine Dickens' Ebenezer Scrooge in iconic post-WWII America, with their signature "retro-glam original choreography set to the velvet voice of international jazz singer — and local sweetheart — Halie Loren," says Katey Finley of Ballet Fantastique. Catch the show at the Hult Center, 7:30 pm Friday and Saturday, Dec. 11-12, with a 2:30 pm matinee Dec. 13; $28-$58.

And finally, for some of us, it just doesn't feel like the holidays without the complete-and-unabridged Nutcracker, and Eugene Ballet Company's perennial favorite never disappoints. (Magic! Mice! A giant Gingerbread lady with children who live under her skirts! What's not to love?) Tchaikovsky's indelible score, played live by Brian McWhorter's Orchestra Next and sung by the Festival Singers, with lovingly-rendered choreography by EBC's Toni Pimble, makes this a holiday tradition for many.

"Nutcracker is a great way to celebrate the holiday season," Pimble says. "Christmas isn't the season without Nutcracker — it's a great way to introduce young children to classical ballet." ♦

Catch Clara, Fritz, the Prince and the Sugar Plum Fairy herself on 7:30 pm Friday and Saturday, Dec. 18-19, and 2 pm Sunday, Dec. 20, at the Hult Center; $15-$53.

WRITER LAUREN KESSLER'S

NUTCRACKER JOURNEY by Rachael Carnes

Raising the Barre: Big Dreams, False Starts, & My Midlife Quest to Dance the Nutcracker (Da Capo Press) by local author Lauren Kessler begins with the moment, a little over a year ago, when — in the midst of her middle-aged working-mom life — Kessler gets a bee in her bonnet to dance The Nutcracker with the Eugene Ballet Company.

With a funny and warm writing style, Kessler describes a history of doubts, from the poking comments of her early dance teachers to her powerful drive to succeed in EBC's performances — by any means necessary.

Once she meets with EBC's artistic director Toni Pimble, who agrees to give her a shot, Kessler is off and running, taking every opportunity she can to ready herself. In just a few short months, she'll share the stage with professional dancers, and she wants to look the part.

"The book is about taking on challenges when you don't have to and pushing yourself out of the comfort zone you worked so hard to get to in the first place," Kessler says. "Doing that brought me face-to-face with the experience of being a beginner, which is all about humility and patience and depending on others. That was a great lesson to re-learn."

Throughout the rigorous rehearsal process, with many hours spent in dance class and on the road, Kessler's story hits its stride: "Dancing moved me out of my head, where I almost always reside, and into my body," she says. "It gave me back (if only for fleeting moments) the kind of embodied joy I remember experiencing as a girl."

Raising the Barre reads as a who's who in Eugene dance and bodywork. (I was tickled, for example, to see my next-door neighbor Summer Spinner featured as a Barre 3 instructor.) And Kessler chronicles her pursuit of the "ballet body" by checking out fitness and dance classes all across town.

"Researching this book, joining the company and befriending these professional dancers reignited my interest in the art form and made me realize what I hadn't as a child — this is a life of enormous sacrifice," Kessler says.

In the book, Kessler explores the history of ballet in a fascinating romp through the last few centuries. Kessler finds lively ways to tell the story of an evolving pedagogy and art form.

"I have been interested in and in love with ballet ever since I sat, transfixed, at age 5, watching my first Nutcracker at Lincoln Center with my mother," Kessler explains.

Kessler says her experience onstage has given her a new appreciation for the inner workings of dance-making and choreography, as well as its financing and the life of the (few) dancers who make a (modest) living at it.

"What strikes me the most after this experience is the difference between how effortless ballet looks to us in the audience and how agonizingly difficult it truly is — how light, airy and otherworldly the dancers appear to us on stage and how disciplined, intense and often grueling their lives actually are," Kessler says.

"Most dancers — like most writers, musicians and artists — cannot make even a modest living just by dancing. Seeing how the EBC dancers manage their lives to make dancing possible made me admire them even more."

Kessler says she looks forward to reprising her role as Aunt Rose in EBC's Nutcracker at the Hult, Dec. 18-20.

"If I can still fit into the costume," she adds. ♦

Raising the Barre is available from DaCapo Press. Lauren Kessler presents her new book 7 pm Monday, Nov. 30, at the UO Global Scholars Hall.
